or his country, until his fertile brain has originated a complicacy which, if successfully executed, must result either in a fundamental and vital change in the churacter of that government, or in the dismemberment of the Confederacy. Mr. Douglas, through inordimate ambition of the Presidency, with no reference are incumentative to receive the contract of the cont have no evidence that his opinion on this ject underwent any change. In 1838, peti-m began to come before Congress in favor as began to come before Congress in lavor abolishing slavery in the District of blumbia. Mr. Calhoun, with all the chagrin his attempted multification still rankling life bosom, met these petitions with an un-aguised and furious wrath; and here we we the first indications of a change in his attutional right of Congress to adopt a sure of that character. In 1820 Congress exercised that right, with the approval of Cathoun, in the ensement of the Missouri promise, imaginate as the law of France guised slavery in the issuritory included hat act. This right was tacitly conceded hat each This part of 1836 and 1836 are received.

Service of the control of the contro

Mr. Calhoun and these who cooperated with him resolved to bring about this dilemma.
Accordingly on Friday, the 19th day of February, 1847, Mr. Calhoun brought into the U.

the Constitution to because statery theres. This was the first public counciation of Mr. Cathoun's new theory of the federal Constitution—a theory directly in opposition to the views of the framers of that instead ment, in opposition to the uniform practice of the government from its foundation to that near, in opposition to the standard of the government from its foundation to that period, in opposition to repeated decisions of our highest judicial tribunals, and set on foot for the perpetuation and predominance of an institution repugnent to correct notions of human rights and to the spirit of our free inhuman rights and to the spirit of our free institutions. To ungar-cost the pill, Mr. Calhoun, as has been done by another person on a subsequent occasion, closed up his series of resolutions, with the following til-bit of "Popular Sovereignly."

Recless, That it is a fundamental principle in our political erest, that a people is forming a cannitation have the unconditional right to form and adopt the government which they may think best calculated to secure their liberty, promarity and happiness; and that in confermity thereto, no other condition is imposed by the federal constitution of a State in order to be admitted into this Union, except that ils constitution shall be republican.

This "dop to Cerburge" affects a clue to fue famous "stump speech in the belly of the Nebraska Bill" of 1856, though the latter was more effectual in performing its "true intent" of deception than the former. These resolutions of 1841 of course met with a very decided opposition in Congress. They were denounced by Mr. Benton immediately upon their introduction, who Affy characterised them as a "firebrand," and who said of them "that as Seylia saw in the young Cesar many Markases, so did he see in these resolu-tions many nullifications." They were opposed by Mr. Webster and Mr. Clay—by all the ed by Mr. Webster and Mr. Chay—by all the great names then in Congress. Even Mr. Dauglas made a speech in opposition to their leading idea, which, in all his subsequent speeches in favor of the same principle, he has never yet been able to answer. The resolutions were not pressed to a/vote.

During 1847 8 the acquisition of Mexican territory occurred. Over this territory the law of freedom enacted by Mexico remained in full force. The resolutions of 1847, deeying to Congress the right of intervention in alavery affairs in the Territories, Mr. Calhoun found were not sufficient for his purpose. They rather thwarted instead of advancing his scheme of Africanization; for in danying power to legislate upon the subject, the denial worked both ways. Freedom was the law of the land, and Congress was estopped from changing it. The necessity for still another theory of the issieral Constitution, by which it would be made to carry slavery into territory free by the tex laci, became as once apat would be made to carry slavery into territory free by the text loci, became at once apparent, and Mr. Calhonn was ready for the extremey. Advancing from the doctrine that Congress had not the right to prohibit slavery in the Territories, he now assumed that the rederal Constitution, or at least that portion of the supposed to recognize slavery, extended tooff by its one wayer to all the Territories within the followal furialistian, by which slavery was in fact made the common law of the land, and existed by writer a, the Constitution wherever freedom had by write a the Constitution wherever freedom has not been established by low.

Whatever may be said to the disparagement of Mr. Colloon, it must be admitted that be possessed the virtue of fair-dealing and hopesuy. He belief proclaimed his doctrines and admitted their consequences fully He had no concealments; otherwise, inslead of revolting the moral sense of the nation by a sudden uselaration of doctrines o infernally attractors, he would have concealed a nortion of Compromise, Insumed as the law of France recognized shavery in the territory included in that act. This right was tacitly conceded by the resolution of 1838, but the expediency of the exercise was dealed. There was no depist of either the right or the expediency in 1838, on the part of Congress, of excluding shavery from the Territories. It was only the expedience of colorating it after it had been planted there by local law, that was denied by Mr. Calhoun's resolution.

by the general government. The detachment now in town consists of G. H., Pescock, Train Master; B. Mollhausen, Artist; F. W. Egioff-stein, Telegrapher; and Dr. J. B. Newberry, Surgeon and Geologist. They all leak sobins and healthy, and appear to be in good spirits. They ield Man Prancisco on the first of last. Novamber with their iron steamer, to explore in 1856 when he was rilliby is the emigrants from his own State who had been murdered and plundered in Kaness and declare that his principles remain unchanged, or if anything improved by the embettuation of the Dred Scott degma for his old-fashioned, wornout Equatter-Sovereiguty. They excuse his fallacy of giving the people of the Territories the power to exclude Stavery, on the ground of "inadvertence." They perceive be has "a serious error to atone for" in this respect, but hold that he is atoning for it with all reasonable dispatch—which is our opinion They left Was Francisco on the first of las. Novamber with their iron steamer, to explore the Colorado and its tributaries. They assended the rives readily and quartered awhile at Fort Umas. Then they resceived orders to hasten with the survey for the purpose of sacertaining how far the river was savigable, with the view of making that the route for transporting troops and freight to Utah. They continued to explore with their from steamer about 500 miles from the mouth of the river, and 350 miles above Powents of the river and 350 miles above Powents of and freight to Utah. They continued to explore with their from steamer about 300 miles from the mouth of the river, and 350 miles showe Ford Umas, bringing them within one day's ride of the lower flormon settlement. This was near the mouth of the Vigin River, where the old Spanish Trail passes. They represent the country in that richnity as exceedingly grand and picturesque in Roesery, but barren, worthless and incapable of sustaining a civilized population. The Mohave Indians are the principal tribe, and their manners and habits are very peculiar and interesting. High mountain chains are found here, with a series of valleys rouning between them.

Above this place the bountry is high and broken with deep quiches overhung with mountain cliffs. High tuble lands were sometimes found, through which the river cut its way to the depth of 6,000 to 7,000 feet, with banks almost perpendicular. There was a general scarcity of water and wood through all this typer country, the only timber found being a few pine forcess on the belter portion. The supplies were so difficult to obtain that this detachment were obliged to come through to Fort Dedame, and Lieut. Ives returned to superintend the steamer. They reashed Fort Dedame, and Lieut. May, reashed Fort Dedame, and Lieut. reacoable dispatch—which is our opinion also. They have ascertained that his split with the National Democracy was merely a tab thrown to the Illinois whale—that on no other terms could be have hoped to retain his seat in the Senate. For this dodge they exceed the largest cancildration—the most recise the largest consideration—the most forgiving charity. To labor for the extension of slavery and keep a Free-Soil constituency in good numer, is not so easy a job. One's

During the past session of Congress, Mr. Doughas appreasy argued that the stributes of severeignty belong only to the State of the confederacy; that the people of a Territory have the absolute right to form a Constitution in the confederacy; that the people of a Territory have the absolute right to form a Constitution in their own way and without Congressional intervention only because such a Constitution is intended to appreas the sovereignty will, so soon as the new State shall be admitted to the Union. If the Dougha has eccasionally amployed the axpression "Fogular Sovereignty" in any sense opposed to this, his own able expositions of the subject des fully sufficient to demonstrate that he inadvartantly fell into a mere error of expression (very prevalent at the time), while including to designate the Jacobia power of gelf-government which the people of a Territory are assailed to a xerr by permiss on of Congress.

A Sensible View of the Republican Party.

The Hon. John C. Breckinging, Viceesident of the United States, lately made a mp speech at some placeric place in Ken-ky, intended to bear on the election which about to take place in that State. It was not perhaps quite in keeping with the dignity of his position to make a stump speech stall; but it is creditable to him that he utlared more truth on the occasion than usually falls from the lips of a Democratic crater. He appreciates the position and strength of the Republican party, as may be seen by the fol-Republican party, as may be seen by the following extracts from his speech;

"The Republican party," ead he, "is the strongest organisation in the Union, unless the Bennoeratic party is stronger. It is the only great living visial organisation that has or ean withstand the Democratic party. It is a powerful, a compact, aboyeth) organization. Twenty-segen years ago there was a fashiomable and literary wedding in London. The bridegroom, Edward Lytton Bulwer, was a young man of mark. He had graduated with honors, received the prize for the best English poem, and had began to publish the novels which have since created an equal sensation in May Fair and in St. Giles. He was the pet of the delicate, interesting young ladies who were a little blue. It was one of these angels that he led to the altar. A once popular poetess tells to the world that Eulwer was pale and fascinating young man; his bride was the more charming becames she was in delicate health, and her complexion was like "rose leaves crushed on ivory." No union could have promised better. Balwer was rising to the topmost wave of success, while his wife who was beautiful and elever, foand

a welcome in every drawing room of Belgravia.

A little more than ten years pass away, and we find our couple not quite so interesting to themselves. A soa has been born to them. Lady Bulwer inclines to en ben point and has a bad temper. Her husband has been created a baronet, and is recognized as one of the first, if not the first, living writer of fiction. He works hard, and of interion, it is whispered, amuses binnelf after the tashion of Young England. His chambers are those of a backclor. Madame lives in the country and comes down post one day, to find her husband entertaining a dinner parity more joyous than select. The twain have lived apart for some time, and the separation is made eternal by a circumstance which occurred in Sir Edward's introduction to a political life. He rises to speak for the first time in the House of Commons, and fails to fulfil the great expectations that had been raised by his literary achievements. In tact, he breaks down altogether. Tannted by his wife, he so far forgets his manhood, according to report, as to have Copartnerships, &c.

O-PARTNERSHIP.-THE UNDERSIGN have this day form d a co-partnership under nd name of DE ISON & CALKINS, for the achievements. In tact, he breaks down altogether. Taunted by his wife, he so far forgets his mushood, according to report, as to indict a blow upon her. From this time war is declared between them. The lady makes her debat in the literary world with a novel called "Cheverly," which is followed by a pamphlet detailing her family troubles, and two other novels, severally entitled "Bebind the Scenes" and "Very Successful." All of these novels contain severe attacks upon Str Edward and his friends. Curriously enough some of her bitterest sarcasms in "Bebind the Scenes" were levelled against Mr. Charles Dickens, whose matrimonial troubles have since afforded a wide field for the London gossips.

Lady Bulwer's venom against Sir Edward is rather heightened as she grows older and fatter, and as she grows richer and more famous. In politics he rises to the surface with the Derby Ministry, and is appointed Colonial Secretary. To accept this appointment he must resign his seat in Farliament, and enter upon a hotly contested election in his own country, where he is far from being personally popular. While finishing his address to the electors with the customary tribute to the "galaxy of temale beauty" within sight of the hustings, the rose leaf beauty of thirty years ago appears upon the scene, in the shape of a stout, red-faced matron of about fifty summers, before whose dread presence the statesman beats an ingleorious. However mortifying this reasontre must have been to the barronet, the result was in his favor. He was returned to the House, duly installed in the Cabluct, and has now succeeded in incarcerating his wife in a madhouse.

The later proceedings of Sir Edward Balwer Lytton are such as will go far to damage him in the estimation of his most ardent admirers. It appears that he received with his wife her the precept and practice of the denomination should be so widely at variance with each other. 'Such was the laxity of administration, that candidates would be received into the church though loaded down with a weight of gold under which they could scancely walk. The speaker was very severe upon his brother ministers for wearing gold spectacles. He said the glass would magnify just as well if set in steel or iron. He denounced gold studs, gold watch-chains, gold-headed canes and diamond breast plus with much fervor.

"Another speaker was for bringing the practice of the people up to the standard of the Discipline to the practice of the people. He thought it very ridiculous to admit that superfluity of dress was wrong, and then expunge the rule because people would not comply with it.

"Another contended that the rule against superfluous ornaments' did not apply to such things as spectacles and walking canes. He agreed, also, that if these things were for bidden, there was not a word in Scripture against the use of them by men—that the precept applied exclusively to the women."

"The Rev. Dr. Lee of Virginia was in favor of expunging. He admitted that he had to use his gold specuacles to see what was in the Discipline. He slid not understand, and never had understood it. Wast ornaments were superfluous? Who could say at what precise point ornaments ceased to be allowable and became superfluous? He ridiculed the idea that we might carry as many swenty dollar gold pieces in our poskets as we please, but if we should stick a little bit of it in the bosom, somebody would be greatly scandalized. He allways found enough to do in preaching about more important matters, without descending to these trifies.

"Another member from Virginia protested against Dr. Lee's speech going forth as an exponent of the sentiments of the Methodists of that State.

"The nev. Mr. Deems deprecated the ter dency to superfluity in dress, but was in fivor of abolishing the rule. He represents it as 'llfting a straw to the whirlwind.' 'might do for the regulation of a seciety, but the state of the second in assume to be the mante. it as 'niting a straw to the unitwine.' I 'might do for the regulation of a secety, by for the charch to assume to be the mantan 'maker, milliner and tailor of her members' was a contemptible desceration of her sacre office.' He was in favor of getting the tru sap to effectalite through the tree, so that 'should put forth healthy isaves, but did no believe in pulling off this leaf and that, &c. "After considerable discussion, the subject was indefinitely postponed."

Crinoline Dangers.

Dr.m. Hell's Journal of Health.]

Whereas the ladies will be admired the world over, however fantastically or ridioulously they may dress; and whereas they will dress to suit themselves, being the actual sovereigns of creation—man being the second tiddle; and whereas the loss of one of them is a public and private calamity. Be it therefore own on the noor, and roll over and over; or, better still, draw the carpet over the body, head and cars; this will instantly extinguish the flames, and prevent horrible and ghastly scars for life, about the face.

It is natural in accidents of this kind for It is natural in accidents of this kind for one woman to run to the rescue of another; self-sactifieng devotion; and the chances are that both the rescued and the rescuer will suffer terribly. Have a little presence of mind, and enjoin the person on fire to lie down, but whether lying down or standing up, envelope the sufferer in a woolen shawh, or out, or overcoat, or blanket from the bed, or the carpet or rug—anything woollet. When the fire is extinguished, remove the tothing as speedily as possible, and cover every burned place with dry flour, the most universally accessible, the most instantaneous pain-arrester, and the most specially curative agent that can be cuployed. A molester comes from the surface of the injured parts, which, mixing with the flour, makes a paste of gine impervious to the atmosphere. It is the of gine impervious to the atmosphere. It is the oxygen of the atmosphere which keeps up the burning, after the flame is extinguished; so any means which excludes air arrests the arning and destruction. Thus it is that when part is burned the pain is instantly removed y plunging it in cold water, where it may be kept until the flour can be procured.

Lyton are suon as will go far to damage him in the estimation of his most arcient admirers. It appears that he received with his wife her income of £400 per annum, which was most welcome to him at the time; that when he became rich he refused to allow Lady Lytton more than the sum above named, and that now he has attempted to silence her forever, by confining her as a maniac. A novelist by profession, he has given the plot for a sensation story of the first class;; a statesman by inclination, he has shown in his own person the necessity of still further guards around the personal liberty of the subject. The news paper accounts, however, go to show that he is inclined to compromise matters with Lady Lytton—N. Y. Herald. Leather and findings. HARDENBERGH & WILLIAMS, TER STREET,

"And now occurred a most extraordinary scene. Among the matchlock-men, who to the number of 700 or 300 were lying behind the walls of the houses, was a body of Charses or Mussulman fanatics, who, like the Roman Deci, devote their lives with solemn osths to their country or their faith. Uttering lend eries, "lisamilith, Alish, deen deen!" one hundred asad thirriy of heast fanatics, sword in hand, with small circular bucklers on the left arm, and great summer-bungs, rashed out after the Sikha, and dashed at the left of the right wing of the Highlanders. With bodies bent and heads low, waving their tolwars with a circular notion in the air, they came on with astonishing rapidity. At first they were mistaken for Sikhs, whose passage had a residy somewhat disordered our rasks. Fortunately, Six Cobin Campbell was close up with the 42d: his keen, quick eye detected the case at conce. 'Steady, mon, steady; close up the ranks. Bayonet them as they come on 'It was just in time, for/these madmen, furious with bhang, were already among us, and a body of them sweeping around the left of the right wing, got into the rear of the regiment. The struggle was sangularly the short, Three of them flashed as suddenly at Colonel Cameron that they pushed him off his horse ere he could delead himself. His sword fell out of its abeath, and he would have been hacked to pieces in another bus for the splaint prompitude of Colon-Sargeant Gardiner, who; stepping out of the ranks, dreve his beyonets of the 43d. In a few minutes the dead bodies of one handred and thirty-three of these Ghazees, and some eighteen or twenty wounded man of ours, write the otwers left of the struggle." Plumbing. BROWN & WILDER

"Discipline" of the Church by striking out the rules respecting dress: The article on that subject has the following passages:

"Receive none into the Church till they leave off superfluous articles and ornaments:

"Give no tickets to any that wearbigh heade, enormous bonnets, ruffles, orrings." The putting on of gold and costly apparel' is also, in snother place reckoned among sins to be avoided.

"The Rev. Mr. Lush of Mississippi, the mover of the resolution to strike oal, contended that the law was a dead letter, and that it was a scandalous inconsistency that the precept and practice of the denomination. the precept and practice of the denomination should be so widely at variance with each other.
